The background is white with several overlapping circles and shapes in various colors: red, teal, yellow, orange, and light blue. A large light blue circle is centered on the page, containing the main text. A smaller red circle is positioned above and to the left of the main circle, containing a white quotation mark icon. Other smaller circles in teal, yellow, and orange are scattered around the page.

Illustrations in picture books often give you hints about what a character is thinking or feeling, or how that character is acting. They also can give you hints about some of that person's character traits. We are going to look at some pictures.

You will talk with your friends and use a character trait to describe what that character is thinking or feeling. Then write your answer in the blank space on your worksheet. You can use the posters if you need help finding a word.

Read Aloud

I'll read Polka-dot Fixes Kindergarten, and as I read, think about the character traits of the characters in the story.

Never Say Always

Saying things like “You never...” or “You always...” can be unfair. No one is ALWAYS something. No one is NEVER something. People can change. How did Liz change by the end of the story? How did the relationship between Liz and Polka-dot change? Why did that happen?

Your Turn!

You will write a personal narrative about a time when you were struggling to get along with someone, and you changed how you felt about that person. The narrative should be one complete paragraph with 3-6 sentences. Use the writing paper in your packet called, “My Polka-dot Experience.”
